The world-renowned Open House Festival of architecture, in which interesting buildings open their doors to the public in 32 cities in Europe, America, and Australia, is also taking place in the Czech Republic. This year in Prague will be the second year that visitors can take a look into over 50 buildings with exceptional interiors, interesting histories, and unusual views of Prague. Among the buildings that will be open are the normally inaccessible parts of the Salm, Schwarzenberg, and Sternberg palaces. As part of the festival, some of BB Centrum's buildings will also be open to the public.
